Flash drives are now a thing of the past. Storage specialists and biologists have collaborated and created organic memory- memory stored in living cells. This makes the human brain a super storage device. You are a human flash drive and your mission is carry information between 4 locations across the world. This is your profession and people with big secrets use your brain to transfer information. Even though the data is in your brain, you cannot read it yourself. However sometimes, some information leaks into your consciousness and you learn new things at random. Your mission is to pick up the information from location 1, travel to location 2. In location 2, there is an information leak and you realize that you are carrying the schematics for all the weapons and vehicles of a secret army, the belongs to a billionaire businessman. This gives you the skills to build these weapons and vehicles.

Come up with the story line for 3 video game levels where:

- Level 1: A large file is copied into your brain and you begin your travels to a particular location. Government agents of that particular country are trying to stop you.
- Level 2: You are about to deliver the data to the destination, but there is a data leak and you realize that you are carrying the schematics for a secret army. You decide to not deliver it because it would put the world in danger. You now have to escape the billionaire's mansion and fight his guards.
- Level 3: You build 5 weapons of your choice- what are these weapons? And how do you use them to stop the evil billionaires' plan.
